To be adequately prepared for any College Admissions Representative visit, you must do some basic research into their college/university.

You do this so that ...

- ✓ you can speak intelligently about their college/university
- ✓ you can ask meaningful questions

Your ability to do these two things is a direct reflection on you as a student and will certainly affect your chances of getting into that college/university. Treat this visit like it is part of your college application process, because it is! College representatives keep track of every contact they have with a student, both positive and negative. This is your opportunity to make a positive impression!
